Browns Win in the Ninth Clubbing Way to Victory

Joe Boehling Mussed Up for Quartet of Hits Almost in Row—Score, 5 to 3.

JOHNSON IN OUTFIELD

Walter Enacts Dual Role—Hamilton
Touched Up Freely—Griffen
Lack Fight.

By WILLIAM PEET.

Probably the best way to win a ball game is to bust that old pitcher to the ungrounded spots in the outfield, and this is just what Branch Rickey's Browns did yesterday in the ninth inning, four hits almost in a row, and the exciting tie and gave the Rick-eyites the fat end of a 5 to 3 score.

It was Joe Boehling that this bombardment took place, and as Boehling had relieved Gallia when St. Louis came to the bat in the eighth, he must be charged with the defeat.

At one time it looked as if the Griffen would be able to pull through on top, but this unexpected bombardment in the ninth took all the starch out of the local—almost the fight, too, for the Griffen did not appear to care what happened and played out the string just as a matter of form.

Back in 1912 it was different, a two-run lead by the opposition meant nothing at all, but times have changed since then.

Two Runs Off Gallia.

Bert Gallia was nominated to oppose Earl Hamilton instead of Slater, as advertised. Gallia was rumbled up for a couple of markers in the first inning and reached for another in the fourth. The Texan retired when Alva Williams went to bat for him in the seventh.

Hamilton was not for fine safeties, but his slow throws were pretty hard to bunch, and outside of the fourth and seventh innings the Griffen could do nothing with him when cracks meant chills.

Henry Drops Third Strike.

There is just a bit of tragedy in connection with Boehling's work, with nobody really to blame for what happened, but two were down, second and third clogged, with Hank Severid, the catcher, at bat. The count was two strikes and two balls when Severid swung at a low curve, a foul tip resulting. Henry dropped the ball. A minute later Severid batted out the single to left field, with second over two runs and won the ball game.

And Henry being able to clutch the bat on that foul tip, there is no tell-tale would have happened, but this is a case of an all-time, and we are not blaming him for it. He was not pulling any stunts these days.

Gallia was the fans a glimpse of Walter Johnson in a pinch, after Johnson had pitched for Acosta in the fourth inning, the great pitcher was shoved into right field, had one out, and then Gallia took over. Gallia got away badly. St. Louis chocked two runs out of his system before the first inning had passed. Shotton opened with a triple to the right field barrier, scoring on Austin's single over McBride's head. Slater forced Austin, but Pratt headed, and when McBride traced out Walker's single, Pratt perished stalling for the final out.

Browns Score Again.

Pratt's single to start the Browns' fourth, followed by Clarence Walker's vicious drive to the jury box, added another run.

It was not until the other half of the fourth that the Nationals got into the game. Two were gone when the Griffen bombarded Hamilton for a couple of markers.

After Milan and Shanks had been retired Chick Gandil walked to bat over Shotton's head. Gandil walked, Henry singled to right field, scoring Gandil, and when McBride poked away to left, Johnson sprinted across, Gallia fanned for the final out.

The Nationals tied the score in the seventh inning, when a pass hit by Brown came to bat in a three-bagger, pinch-hitting for Gallia, sacrificed, and when Pratt tossed out Moeller, McBride moved up to third base. Foster walked and Milan clubbed the ball out of Howard's reach, scoring McBride.

Williams' advent as a pinch hitter called for a fresh pitcher when the Browns came to bat in the eighth, and Joe Boehling was on the mound. Boehling retired the side in order during this chapter, but came to grief in the ninth when Pratt opened the hit-and-run signal. Lavan, attempting to pull off the "squeeze play," popped to Boehling, but Severid put one on the finishing touches with a safe crack to left field, scoring both Walker and Howard.

With two down in the Nationals' half of the ninth, Moeller gave the fans a faint flutter of excitement by dropping the ball safely out of Walker's reach in right field, but Foster's pop fly to Severid ended the game. Score: 5 to 3.

SOX ARE BEATEN IN RACE

Blackburn Makes Wild Heave,
Paving Way for Yanks to Trim Chicago, 2 to 1.

WYCKOFF SHOWS FORM

But Twenty-eight Batters Face Young
Hurier and Mackmen Trim
Indians, 1 to 0.

By WILLIAM PEET.

New York, July 31.—A ninth inning rally enabled the Yankees to defeat Chicago today, 2 to 1. Caldwell and Benz fought it out for eight innings with the lanky Highlander having an edge. Boone opened the final with a double, Hipp went for a sacrifice, but Blackburn tossed the ball away and Boone scored. High tailed the other Yankee runner after pounding the ball into the grandstand for a homer. The score:

Chicago..... 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 5 1
New York..... 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 2 0 0
Batteries—Blackburn and Miller; Caldwell and Numa; Hipp, Boone, and Miller; and Mackmen and Mackmen.

Wyckoff Shows Class.

Philadelphia, July 31.—Only twenty-eight batters faced Wyckoff today, C. Mack's mauling, trouncing Cleveland, 1 to 0, in almost record time. The only tally of the game went over in the eighth, Wambsgans' miff on an attempted force-out gave the Athletics the verdict at the end of one hour and eleven minutes of play. Score:

Cleveland..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0
Philadelphia..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0

Tigers Are Beaten.

Boston, July 31.—A wild throw by Cady resulted in Detroit's only run in today's game with the Red Sox, who won, 4 to 1. Consistent swatting and a misplay by Bush explains the quartet of runs garnered by the locals. Foster pitched shut-out ball throughout. Score:

Detroit..... 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 4 1
Boston..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0
Batteries—Covaleski, Stein and Stange; Foster and Cady; Emmons, Moore, Nollis and Inter.

Among the rowing enthusiasts who belong to the local boat clubs is a youngster who promises to develop into one of the best single scullers in Washington.

He is a member of the Annapolis Boat Club and is getting the benefit of the excellent coaching of Clarence R. Hecox, who has done such great work with the local club crews.

Thomas H. Simpson is his name, and although he has never entered a race he has been a follower of water sports all his life.

Some years ago Simpson was a member of the Waverly Club of New York City and in 1913-14 was a member of the Potomac Boat Club.

This year he joined the Annapolis and has been training hard three times a week under the watchful eye of Hecox.

Simpson's worst enemy is weight as he tops the beam around 180 pounds but the hot weather and steady training is already beginning to do the work and by fall he should be down to where he can do his best work.

Potomac Juniors Beaten By Baltimore Oarsmen

Local Crew Lowers Colors to Arundel Eight, Being Defeated by a Length.

Baltimore, Md., July 31.—The Potomac Boat Club of Washington, put up a corking race against the Arundel Boat Club in the junior eight-oared shell event which was the feature of the Arundel regatta held here today. The Washingtonians were forced to lower their colors at the finish, however. The start was perfect and the browned shoulders of the oarsmen of both crews made single blotch to the eyes of the spectators.

They came down the first half of the stretch nose-and-nose, and there was not a man who could have foretold who was to win. In the last quarter mile, the Arundels began to forge ahead and they never lost the lead.

They advanced gradually until the bow of the Arundel shell could be seen ahead. When the finish was crossed, the Arundels were a full length to the good.

This gives the Arundels the first leg of the Commodore Robinscote challenge cup. It will be necessary, however, for them to beat the Potomacs twice more in succession to gain final possession.

The race was delayed for sometime on account of an accident which happened to the eight-oared shell which the Potomacs were to have used. A crewman was injured, but the race went on as scheduled.

However, this was wrong. When 16 years old, Slater signed a contract with the Akron, Ohio, team. Later Mrs. Burbage was advanced. Mrs. Moulton yesterday in the second round, 1 up, while Mrs. Bruce L. Taylor defeated Mrs. Smith, 1 up in ten holes.

Slater's name for several seasons has been linked with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and frequently it was erroneously reported that he was a professional despite the fact that he was playing for Michigan.
